About Universal Design Summit 6

The Starkloff Disability Institute provides a unique educational experience showcasing excellent examples of universal design that can be incorporated into homes and neighborhoods. This is the sixth conference organized by the Institute.

The Universal Design Summit is one of the leading conference in North America focused on universal housing and inclusive communities and will be held November 13 -14, in St. Louis. The event will attract several hundred designers, developers and architects from across the country and globe.

Universal Design Summit 6 will provide exceptional content in the areas of universal design in housing and public places, sustainable design, community design and access, and affordability. Learning opportunities will be offered through plenary sessions, breakouts and informal networking.

Dozens of vendors of related products and services will be present throughout the conference, along with exhibits and workshops.

Continuing Education Credits are available through a variety of professional associations.
